They, She, He easy as ABC: Celebrating Uniqueness & Individuality

PURPOSE:
- Inspire an attitude of playfulness
- Encourage self-exploration
- Breakdown gender stereotypes
- Have students create their own alphabet pages similar to the book to share about themselves

WHAT YOU NEED:
- Children's Book: They, She, He easy as ABC
- Alphabet Page Handout for each student (see page 3 of lesson plan or download at: genderwheel.com/abc-page) OR blank paper
- Art Materials! - Pencils, Markers, Watercolors, Crayons....
- OPTIONAL: ABC Video series with Maya Gonzalez (www.genderwheel.com/abc-demo)

HOW TO HOLD:
When reading the book and exploring the art project, model playful curiosity. This is not about teaching a lesson so much as providing a container for self-exploration. An attitude of exploration allows kids to come to their own understanding of self and accept who they are as natural and valuable, outside of rigid roles and definitions. It also makes room for natural fluidity. Play and relaxation naturally help dismantle gender stereotypes and assumptions.

Creating more gender inclusive spaces can happen immediately regardless of how confident you are in discussing gender and pronouns.

How? Be curious.

It’s OK not to have all the answers.

Be present with the kids and learn alongside them. This communicates volumes.

If questions come up, the bottom line is that we know that everybody is valuable and everybody belongs.

Lesson Plan for They, She, He easy as ABC: Celebrating Uniqueness & Individuality

PROCESS:

1. Read They, She, He easy as ABC to students. Set a playful, curious tone from the beginning. Don’t focus on gender. Ask open questions that draw kids in. What hairstyles would you like to have? What clothing style? Are there kids that remind you of yourself?

2. After reading the book, provide each student with either an Alphabet Page Handout (see next page of lesson plan) or a blank sheet of paper.

3. Use the book as a model and have students put the first letter of their name in the top left corner.

4. Encourage students to write two simple sentences about how they like to dance or what they like using their name and pronoun (if they use one) in a similar format to the book.

5. For older kids, you may wish to view the 4 part video series with Maya to learn more about rhythm and rhyme and the different steps to make the art as well as some behind-the-scenes looks at the book: www.genderwheel.com/abc-demo

6. Students can then create a drawing of themself illustrating what they wrote. For additional support in creating the art, you can offer students the handout on page 4 to show the individual steps to create a drawing or watch Video 3 in the demo series for tips directly from Maya.

7. Share and display your Alphabet Pages!

Draw Yourself!

Play with drawing yourself the same way the people in the book are drawn. Here is each step slowed down so you can see how to do it yourself. Include as many details about yourself as possible. Make it feel like you. In fact you can use this drawing of yourself to feel any and all the ways you feel. Angry, sad, scared, happy, more... You can also use this drawing to share what you're good at, what you want to learn, what you already know, what your ancestors endured and who you are in your lineage, what you hope for future kids, and more!
